The most common reason for a child to have a brain bleed outside of injury is from a Brain AVM. Brain AVM's typically remain undetected until they rupture, causing blood to spill into the surrounding brain tissue - a hemorrhagic stroke. Most importantly, there are very few treatment options to cure a child diagnosed with a Brain AVM, and children with larger AVM's or children whose AVM is in an eloquent location have almost no way to be cured safely and without permanent deficits.

The goal of this walk is to not only raise awareness about brain AVM's but also raise funds for two important charity foundations who help families who have received this devastating diagnosis. The AVM Research Foundation in Houston, partnering with Dr. Roc Chen, is researching a cure and The Aneurysm & AVM Foundation, in connection with TAAF Kids, is dedicated to fundraising for research programs while working to better lives through support networks and assist with the medical care of those affected by aneurysm and other types of vascular malformation of the brain. We are hopeful that through raising money for research there will one day be a safe and effective cure for local College Station High School student Kyler Lewis and other children and adults who are given this life-altering diagnosis.
